

Stefano Bianchini's Presentation: "European Decline, Migration Flows, and Their Socio-Political Impact on the Adriatic-Ionian Area"

Stefano Bianchini's presentation addresses the decline of Europe in terms of economic and political influence, and how this affects migration flows and socio-political dynamics in the Adriatic-Ionian region. He explores the region as a key transit zone for migrants, highlighting the pressures this places on local communities and governance structures. Bianchini also discusses the broader implications of these migration patterns for political stability, economic development, and social cohesion in the region, while considering Europe's shifting role in global geopolitics and its capacity to respond to these challenges.